

An Idol of the Mind

'God as you perceive him' couldn't be divine,
But a rational conclusion—an idol of the mind;
It suits man's self importance, his arrogance and pride
To make god in his image and act so dignified.

Men hold in high regard purveyors of new thought,
Fanciful meanderings that all will come to naught;
They celebrate personas as though they were supreme
And rogues of false religion are held in high esteem.

There is a God in Heaven and He alone is true,
Whom if you seek with all your heart He'll show Himself to you;
But you must seek Him as a child, leave all your pride behind
And you will find enlightenment—no idol of the mind.
