

Prevail Against The Prevalent

To swim against the current is difficult at best,
It's easier to catch a wave, surf riding on its crest.
But you must swim against it to catch the perfect ride,
No shortcuts to achievement, you must face the surging tide.

To stand against the current trends can be a lonely trek,
And sharks can be attracted by you sticking out your neck;
But I say "good on you" for striving with the swell
For others now might notice and join with you as well.

You might feel isolated as the surging waters roll
And the struggle with the current can take a frightful toll,
But I can guarantee you that when you're safe on shore
You won't be on your lonesome, there will be so many more.

With things disintegrating and morals in decline
We need to be proactive, we need to hold the line;
Truth is far from relative—God's word has never changed
Though little gods and despots seek to have it rearranged.

So keep on pressing onward, don't let fear of fail distract,
You are certainly a winner and have made a huge impact;
I, for one have taken heart from you taking on the odds
And standing up to despots who are acting like they're gods.
